ANNOTATION

Each professional community needs a specialized language for the terminology used at the scientific level. For those, working in the field of medicine, that language is Latin per se, also acting as a mediator of Greek – basic for clinical practice, therapy and pathology. Study of Latin and medical terminology during the first year of medical education is sine qua non for every level of training and for the practice of every physician. The philosophy of medical science as a whole and of all its subspecialties is coded in Latin.

Teaching Latin for specialized training in the first year of medical training is the necessary prerequisite for the better acquisition of other disciplines that are part of the syllabus for each specialty studied at Medical University of Plovdiv in the course until completion of studies. According to tradition and methodology accepted and used in Bulgaria, all the diagnoses included in the textbooks and the additional sources for information and practice for the different subjects are written in Latin. That is the reason why the Latin course is of general educational nature, but it is also a supportive discipline for the understanding and utilization of medical concepts in anatomy and clinical practice. In the first year the Latin course meets the immediate needs of students regarding the course in anatomy, while giving them sufficient grammar knowledge and presenting the principles of word formation to meet the long-term needs in the upper courses of study and the medical field of future specialization.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

The syllabus offered aims to teach the students the grammatical and lexical minimum necessary for the proper understanding, reading and writing of diagnoses; the principles of word formation; Greek combining forms and their Latin equivalents.

Study contents according to the aims:

Ist semester: basic Latin grammar aimed at the medical profession: nouns and adjectives – morphological features; agreed and non-agreed attributes; study of a minimum quantity of terms necessary to understand subjects taught in the first course; reading and writing of diagnoses with elementary phraseological structure and syntax; basic information on prescription writing.

IInd semester: Greek declensions in Latin; compound terms word-formations – Greek and Latin terminological elements, prepositions and prepositions as prefixes in word formation; comparatives and superlatives of the adjectives; clinical and pathoanatomical diagnoses.

RESULTS EXPECTED

It is expected that by the end of the Latin course the students are going to be able to use the grammatical and lexical minimum that forms the basic microlanguage in the field of medicine as a science. The course gives the information about the medical terminology as a part of the general human knowledge achieved in its diachronic development.

When the Latin course is completed students should be able to:

- use the lexical minimum that serves the needs of other disciplines;
- use the minimum of grammar necessary for diagnoses understanding;
- use the acquired grammatical minimum for writing diagnoses in Latin with familiar and unfamiliar vocabulary;
- know the principles of compound terms word-formation used in clinical practice, for different types of treatment and kinds of pathology;
- know how to understand the compound clinical and pathological terms;
- be able to produce compound terms by their own.
